He was born in 1790 and died in 1857. At the battle of Vittoria he saved the life of Sir John Keane (afterwards the famous Lord Keane), with the result that there was a life-long friendship between them. Kearney was with him in the last Anglo-American War at the disastrous battle of New Orleans, and when Sir John Keane was made Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in Jamaica, Daniel Kearney was given a high post in the Commissariat Department, which position he held until 1843, when he was retired on half-pay to make way for a person whose name need not be mentioned. GRANTED TO

Lieut.-Colonel Robt. Fulton (79th Foot).

72 · · (a) SULTAN'S GOLD MEDAL FOR EGYPT, 1801 —do—

(b) FIELD OFFICER'S GOLD MEDAL FOR SALAMANCA, 1812

Both extra fine and very rare 2

In the memorable victory achieved by the British army at the battle of Salamanca, on the 22nd of July, the Cameron Highlanders can scarcely be said to have participated. They were stationed in reserve with Major General Campbell's division on the extreme left of the line, and were not brought into action till the close of the day. The loss of the regiment was only 2 rank and file wounded: nevertheless the services of the regiment were considered of sufficient importance to obtain the royal authority for the word "Salamanca" to be inscribed on their colours and appointments, and a gold medal was conferred on the commanding officer, Lieutenant Colonel Robert Fulton.—Vide Records.

FIELD OFFICER'S GOLD MEDAL FOR THE BATTLE OF BARROSA, 1811,

GRANTED TO

Major Alexr. Duncan, Royal Arty., commanding a detachment of the Artillery.

Extra fine and rare 1

The special expressions used by General Graham in his despatch with reference to the services of the Royal Artillery on this occasion are well worthy of a place in the records of the Corps. "I owe too much," he wrote, "to Major Duncan and the officers and corps of the Royal Artillery, not to mention them in terms of the highest approbation: never was artillery better served." He recommended Major Duncan for promotion, and the brevet rank of Lieutenant-Colonel was accordingly conferred upon him. Major Alexr. Duncan commanded the Royal Artillery during the defence of Cadiz in 1810-1812, at the battle of Barrosa, and at Seville, at the last of which places he was killed.—Vide History Royal Artillery.

FIELD OFFICER'S GOLD MEDAL FOR THE BATTLE OF TALAVERA, 1809,

GRANTED TO

Lt. Col. Hy. Seymour, 23rd Light Dragoons.

Extra fine and rare 1

Sir Arthur Wellesley ordered Anson's brigade of cavalry, composed of the 23rd Light Dragoons and the first German Hussars, to charge the head of these columns. They went off at a canter, increasing their speed as they advanced and riding headlong against the enemy; but in a few moments, a hollow cleft which was not perceptible at a distance intervened, and at the same moment the French, throwing themselves into squares, opened their fire. Colonel Arentschild, commanding the hussars, an officer whom forty years' experience had made a master in his art, promptly reined up at the brink, exclaiming, in his broken phrase "I will not kill my young mans!" The twenty-third found the chasm more practicable, the English blood is hot and the regiment plunged down without a check, men and horses rolling over each other in dreadful confusion; yet the survivors, untamed, mounted the opposite bank by twos and threes; Colonel Seymour was severely wounded, but General Anson and Major Frederick Ponsonby, a hardy soldier, passing through the midst of Villatte's columns which were pouring in a fire from each side, fell with inexpressible violence upon a brigade of French chasseurs in the rear. The combat was then fierce, yet short, for Victor seeing the advance of the English, had detached his Polish lancers and Westphalia light-horse, to the support of Villatte, and these fresh men coming up when the twenty-third, already overmatched, could scarcely hold up against the chasseurs, entirely broke down. Those who were not killed or taken, made for Bussecour's Spanish division and so escaped; yet with a loss of two hundred and seven men and officers, about half the number that went into action.

The Count d'Artois, on his re-entry into France in the year 1814, conferred upon the National Guards, on the 2nd April, 1814, the permission to wear a white watered riband, with a silver fleur-de-lis suspended from it, and surmounted by a crown, as a distinguishing mark of the services which they had rendered. To each individual was delivered a brevet conferring the right to wear this decoration at the button-hole of the coat. Subsequently it was successively granted to the army and a part of the nation. By an Ordonnance of the King, of the 5th of August, 1814, a blue border of two millimetres was added to the riband of the National Guard of Paris, and by another Ordonnance, on the 15th of April, 1816, the King supplied the place of the fleur-de-lis by a star, enamelled white and blue, bearing on one side a portrait of Louis the Eighteenth, with the motto "Fidelité dévouement" (Fidelity, devotion), and on the reverse a lily, with the date of the following remarkable days: 12th of April, 3rd of May, 1814, 17th of March, 3rd of July, 1815. It is suspended from a riband which is divided into three equal parts, the centre white and the two others royal blue.

At Bushire, Persia, on December 9, 1856, Captain Wood led the Grenadier company, which formed the head of the assaulting column. He sprang on the parapet of the fort, being the first to reach it, and was instantly attacked by a number of the enemy. They fired a volley when only a yard distant from him, and, although hit by seven bullets, he flung himself upon the enemy, killed their leader with his sword, and with his own company, who were following close behind him, routed the enemy and took their position. His decision, energy and determined valour, undoubtedly (to use the words of the Gazette) contributed in a high degree to the success of the attack. His wounds compelled him to leave the force for a time, but, with the pluck and spirit of a good soldier, he rejoined his regiment, and returned to his duty at Bushire before the wounds were properly healed.

Captain Wood joined the army in 1839, and saw service in the Afghan War of 1842.
